A Letter to Our Clients and Stakeholders

Dear Clients and Colleagues,

We hope this letter finds you safe and well. Together, we are navigating an unprecedented global event that challenges us individually and collectively in new ways.

At Deborah Brosnan & Associates, we take the coronavirus pandemic very seriously. Our primary concern is for the health and safety of our team and their families, as well as for our clients and stakeholders. To help stem the outbreak, we are all practicing social distancing, following CDC and national guidelines, and looking out for each other's wellbeing. We continue to assess the information daily and make changes as needed.

I also want to reassure our clients and stakeholders that our work and projects with you continue on track. When I founded the company, it was with the vision of being able to respond to environmental risks and the needs of clients on a rapid and global basis. Our company's infrastructure is set up to allow us to work from anywhere in the world and at any time, no matter the crisis. For instance, right now our team members ranging from the US, through the Caribbean and into the Middle East are working remotely and safely. I say this because we know that for many of our clients, their jobs, companies, and economies depend in part on us getting our work done on their behalf. In these challenging and anxious times, we want to make sure we deliver on those commitments for you and do so in a safe manner. I assure you, we are set up for this. If you have any concerns or questions please contact any of our team members. We are here for you.

As a closing thought, during this pandemic, the actions of every one of us will literally make a difference to how soon this health crisis will end. The virus only survives if it continues to transmit from one host to another, one human to another. So, please follow the directives issued by global health experts. Using common sense, staying calm, and being mindful and respectful of our neighbors will help us get through this and strengthen our community.

Be safe, be kind, and be well

D. M. Brosnan
